

ABSTRACT

There is disclosed a GUI processing system for performing an operation of an application which controls testing equipment for testing a device under test by displaying images such as icons or buttons on a screen, and selecting these images with use of a pointing device. A GUI part can be added or modified by adding drag controller means for implementing a visual drag-and-drop action to model view controller means, without modifying the structure of a model which is a core function of the application.

Express Mail #EL898002963US